Government aims to deliver 100 Indigent Houses

Palmer's Cross

An indigent house in Palmer's Cross, Clarendon that was among the first two units built and handed over under the Municipal Social Assistance Programme (MSAP). MSAP was rolled out in 2017 as part of the Ministry's plan to improve the social programmes and strengthen governance at the local level.

KINGSTON, Jamaica: The Government is targeting the delivery of approximately 100 indigent housing solutions to persons in need across the island.

Minister of Local Government and Community Development, Honourable Desmond McKenzie, said 32 houses have been built and handed over to beneficiaries, with another 12 to be constructed by the end of the financial year.

"I took a conscious decision that if we are going to provide for these people who have served their country, we should provide the best possible solution, so that they can be comfortable living out the last days of their lives."

Some J$63 million has been spent to construct 32 units with four more targeted for construction during the new financial year. All municipalities, except for St. Mary, St James, Hanover, Westmoreland, and Manchester, have received units for those vulnerable who live outside of Infirmaries.

Minister McKenzie said that the beneficiaries on the Indigent Housing Programme have served the country in various areas, such as health and security, and while they have fallen on hard times, the best care must be given to them.

He noted that the Ministry is also looking at increasing the monies allocated to the municipal corporations for social housing assistance.

"We are also continuing to improve our infirmaries islandwide. The final phase of the J$200 million project financed by the National Housing trust is underway. In the 2019/2020 fiscal year, the new female ward at the Manchester Infirmary was completed," the Minister stated.

FALMOUTH, Trelawny: The Ministry of Local Government and Community Development expanded its Municipal Social Assistance Programme (MSAP) with the opening of a Drop-In Centre to serve the homeless population in Falmouth, Trelawny.

The J$19m facility was built on lands at Victoria Street and is a stone's throw away from the Trelawny Police Headquarters and the Falmouth Public General Hospital.

"The expansion of national facilities that will provide care and comfort to our homeless citizens is an important aspect of the work of this Government," said Portfolio Minister, Honourable Desmond McKenzie.

"It is one of the features of the human face of this Administration, and a symbol of our commitment to assisting the vulnerable in our society."

He was speaking at the official hand-over ceremony on Wednesday, July 15, 2020.

Minister McKenzie noted that it is the duty of the Government to protect the vulnerable and the Administration continues to fulfill this responsibility through the rehabilitation of infirmaries and the construction of drop-in centres.

The Trelawny Drop-In Centre is the fifth to be constructed under MSAP's conceptualization in 2017. Similar facilities have been opened in Ocho Rios, St. Ann; Port Maria, St. Mary; Lucea, Hanover, and Black River in St. Elizabeth.

Those expected to be commissioned into use next are in Linstead, St. Catherine and St. Thomas. Drop-In Centres are the first point of contact for homeless persons and offer a range of care including a bath and other hygiene care, food, and medical assessment.

KINGSTON, Jamaica: Ground was officially broken for the construction of the first in 100 indigent housing solutions over the next 12 months by the Ministry of Local Government and Community Development.

The houses are being built under the Ministry's Municipal Social Assistance Programme (MSAP) which was conceptualized during the 2017/2018 fiscal year.

"The Andrew Holness administration has committed to do as much as we can to help to ease the sufferings of persons who fall within the category of poor and destitute," said Portfolio Minister Desmond McKenzie. "We put a new feature in it now, we added a water tank so if there's no water, you have a tank to catch water."

He was speaking at the groundbreaking ceremony for an indigent house at Grant Hill in Lawrence Tavern, St. Andrew on July 29. The one-bedroom residence will be built at a cost of J$2.5 million. The beneficiary is 47-year-old Michelle Cookhorn.

"I'm very glad. Whether it's one or two, I will be a very happy woman," the single mother of five said between tears. "I feel very happy to be selected for this indigent house, I will take care of it. I prayed hard for this house and now victory is mine."

Given the pervading circumstances your property tax has never been so significant, so crucial and central to the continued maintenance of the way of life in our communities,” read a release from the TAJ.

“We express our appreciation and say thank you for your contribution over the years which have made the provision of certain services to our communities possible, such as the provision of streetlights and garbage collection. Our property taxpayers are some of the most patriotic and resilient Jamaicans and you are amongst our heroes, and for this reason we urge all property taxpayers to continue to support your local communities by paying your property tax.”

Property tax payments can be made in full as well as half-yearly or monthly arrangements agreed upon with the Local Government Tax Unit Desks at Collectorate islandwide.
